Carefully open the foil packaging that the condom is wrapped in, taking care not to tear the condom.

You should only take the condom off the penis when there's no further contact with your partner's body.

If the condom will not unroll, it's probably on inside out - start again with a new condom as there may be sperm on it.

While squeezing the top of the condom, roll it down over the length of the erect penis.

Hold the top of the condom between your thumb and thumb to make sure it's put on the right way round and no air is trapped inside (the condom may split if air is trapped inside).

Wrap the used condom in a tissue and put it in the bin. You should never flush condoms down the toilet as they may block the toilet and can cause environmental damage.

Make sure that the condom stays in place while you're having sex. If it comes off, stop and put on a new one.

Place the condom over the top of the penis.

After ejaculation (when the man has come) and while the penis is still hard, hold the condom in place and carefully withdraw the penis from your partner's body.
